

OSI Lands and Projects Offer Alternative Access in the Adirondacks

- ① Trembleau Mountain was acquired by OSI in 2017. The property totals more than 600 acres and features more than 4,000 feet of Lake Champlain frontage, stunning views of the Green Mountains to the east, and the High Peaks to the west.
- ② Located in the heart of the Adirondack Park, the OSI protected 10,000 acre Tahawus property offers historic and cultural insight into the area's rich industrial heritage. The wilderness property contains the highest headwaters of the Hudson River and provides southern access to the High Peaks Wilderness Area by way of newly created trails.
- ③ Huckleberry Mountain is just 90 minutes from Albany. The 1,285-acre property, acquired by OSI in 2017, offers recreational trails that traverse much of the property, with easy access to sweeping views of the forested mountain below and Crane Mountain to the west.
- ④ OSI played a pivotal role in developing a recreational master plan for the Adirondack Gateway Project, which will serve as a new entry point to the central Adirondacks. Located at the site of the former Frontier Town, it will expand recreational opportunities and access to Boreas Ponds.
